Campaign Platform

Community, collaboration, and participation are what my campaign is about. At the University of Denver, our incredible community is one of the many reasons people choose to come here. I believe that this community can grow even stronger by creating more opportunities for students to connect, participate, and work together.

I would advocate for more Social and Community Events for students to connect outside of the classroom. This could include more free or affordable activities during evenings and weekends, as well as programs based on student feedback and interests. The goal would be to create more opportunities for students, especially those who are new to campus to meet people, participate in activities, and feel connected to the University of Denver community.

With so many great clubs, organizations, and activities available to students, I believe it would be incredible to see these groups collaborate more and build a stronger community together. This could include creating opportunities for organization leaders to meet, encouraging clubs to co-host events, improving awareness of events happening across campus, and exploring ways for organizations to share resources and ideas. By bringing different groups together, we can create more opportunities for students to discover new interests, meet people outside their usual circles, and become more involved on campus.

I believe that getting more undergraduate students involved in student-government elections and other opportunities for civic participation can strengthen our campus community. I would support making information about USG events, elections, and voting opportunities easier for students to find and understand. Potential steps could include clearer communication about election dates and procedures, better promotion of voting resources, and partnerships with student organizations to share nonpartisan information about how students can participate.

Ultimately, my goal is to help create a campus where students feel connected to one another, have more opportunities to participate, and feel encouraged to work together. By strengthening community, collaboration, and participation, we can make an already incredible University of Denver community even stronger.
